North Area

The area north of the station doesn't have the same overwhelming amount of vintage shops as the south, but it does have some good used kimono and the Kitakore building, famous for original remakes.

Shopper Tip:

If you don't know where to start, Pal Street and its adjacent areas offer the most variety and the most shops in a congested area. For focus on men's, hit the Southeast area. For women's, take a stroll down Look Street.

Stop for a snack at Hattifnatt- it's like a cafe in a treehouse!

SouthWest Area

The area south of Koenji Station on the west side of Konan Dori Street is the biggest and most expansive area of vintage clothing in Koenji, and perhaps Tokyo. Aside from the true vintage shops there are also a lot of shops selling new and select clothing, as well as antique and collector's shops.

The Southwest vintage area features 3 main areas: the covered shopping arcade Pal Street and its adjacent areas (Details A & B), Etoile Dori Street, and the long Look Street which continues from Pal Street.

Chosenji Temple overlooks a wide street that is the center of an amazing spread of vintage clothing shops

Vintage shopping on Pal Street

SouthEast Area

The area south of Koenji Station and east of Konan Dori Street is the other main vintage clothing area of Koenji. Most shops are sprawled out in the area between Hikawa Shrine and Chuo Park, and many on the side streets are a bit hard to find. All of them have something unique to offer and showcase the true vintage offerings that Koenji has become known for.

The center street of the Southeast area is a treasure trove of vintage shops like Whistler/Chart, Gasoline, S.O, Fifty-Fifty, Re'all, and more.

About Koenji

Koenji, in Tokyo's Suginami Ward, has become known for many things, among them annual festivals such as Awa-Odori and Koenji Fest, underground rock music, and vintage clothing. With over 100 vintage and used clothing stores in the south area alone, it has got to be one of the best vintage and used clothing markets in Tokyo and perhaps all of Japan.

Meet Our Koenji Vintage Guides Josh & Rachel

A young Australian couple who came to Koenji seeking the best vintage clothing in Tokyo, Josh & Rachel explored the area and made some great finds. Josh is a half-Japanese Koenji vintage hunter living in Suginami and Rachel came to visit from Australia to find a unique wardrobe. Here they introduce their picks for Koenji vintage clothes shopping.
